INTRODUCTION

King Kamehameha III established the office of the Marshal of the Hawaiian Islands on April 27, 1846. By 1859, the Marshal was designated the Chief of Police of the Kingdom, and he remained as such through the Republic and Territorial periods. During the last period he was known as the High Sheriff. The island sheriffs, whose offices also originated in 1846, were his subordinates until 1905, when their offices were incorporated into the newly-established county governments. The Office of High Sheriff of the Territory was abolished at the time of Statehood.

The Police Records consist of six series: Series 363, Correspondence of the Marshal and High Sheriff, 1844-1918; Series 364, Correspondence of the Island Sheriffs, 1851-1904; Series 365, Cancelled Oahu Police Constable Commissions, 1886-1894; Series 370, Records of Coroner's Inquests, Island of Hawaii, 1852-1902; Series 372 [Sheriff of Maui] Cashbooks, 1851-1877; and Series 377, Honolulu Police Journals, 1874-1896. They total 33.86 linear feet. A few records were determined not to meet generally accepted Archival standards for appraisal as having enduring value, or the scheduling guidelines in the General Records Schedules of the State of Hawaii for permanent retention, and were weeded during processing.

There is a possibility that some of these records were received from the High Sheriff as early as 1906. Most were received from Oahu Prison in 1947 and two volumes were received from Oahu Community Correctional Center in 1981. Receipts are lacking for a few records.

Access is restricted in some cases because of the fragility of the records; see the six series descriptions for specific restriction information.

AGENCY HISTORY

The office of the Marshal of the Hawaiian Islands was established by the Act to Organize the Executive Departments, signed by King Kamehameha III on April 27, 1846. The Marshal was appointed by the King upon the recommendation of the Attorney General, and was subordinate to the Attorney General. The Marshal was responsible for nominating to the island governors persons to be appointed by the governors as island sheriffs. The Marshal was responsible for instructing the island sheriffs in their duties, inter alia, as executive officers of the courts of record, as conservators of the peace, as trustees of jails, prisons and places of public correction, as safekeepers of prisoners, as executors or criminal sentences, as the executors of executive mandates issued by the King, island governors or executive department heads, as commanders of the civil posse, as the apprehenders of fugitives from justice, including deserters from ships, as the detectors of crimes and misdemeanors, and as coroners. The sheriffs were subordinate to the island governors, were permitted to appoint deputies and were accountable for all escapes and unnecessarily harsh treatment of prisoners.

By Joint Resolution of May 4, 1847, the Legislature amended the Act to Organize the Executive Departments by transferring control of the Marshal from the Attorney General to the Minister of the Interior, which latter official was given the duty of nominating the Marshal for appointment by the King. The Marshal was simultaneously designated ad the Sheriff of Oahu and the Prefect of Police of Honolulu.

This arrangement was confirmed and clarified in detail in the Compiled Laws of 1859, which specified that the Marshal was the Chief of Police of the Kingdom, and which gave the Marshal the authority to appoint the island sheriffs, with the approval of the respective island governors. The Combined Laws also explicitly assigned the duties of the island sheriffs on their islands, cited in the first paragraph, supra, to the Marshal with respect to the Kingdom as a whole, and required that the Marshal submit to the Minister of the Interior a quarterly report of accounts and such other matters relating to the police department as he deemed proper.

Act 8 of 1888 transferred control of the Marshal back to the Attorney General, and confirmed the Marshal as the Chief of Police of the Kingdom. Concurrently, Act 7 of 1888 established the Board of Prison Inspectors, subordinate to the Minister of the Interior, and made such board responsible to supervise the discipline and government of Oahu Prison, and at their discretion to provide rules for all the prisons and jails of the Kingdom. The act provided that the board consult with the Marshal in the performance of its duties, but was explicit that the final authority was with the board. Thus, with respect to prisons, the Marshal was subordinate to the Board of Prison Inspectors. The authority of the Marshal was modified by Act 8, and his duties were expanded by Act 37. Act 8 sustained his authority to appoint the island sheriffs, but authority to approve his appointments was transferred from the island governors to the Attorney General. At the same time, Act 37 provided for the island sheriffs, and the Marshal as Sheriff of Oahu, to take over from the respective island governors the responsibility for the administration of oaths, the control and disposition of wrecks, the shipping and discharge of seamen and the testing and certification of weights and measures.

The Compiled Laws of 1897 confirmed the command relations, authority, duties and responsibilities of the Marshal and island sheriffs as established or modified by the Session Laws of 1888, to include the authority to appoint jailors, and explicitly established that there were three island sheriffs in addition to the Marshal: one for the island of Hawaii; one for Maui, Molokai, Lanai and Kahoolawe; and one for Kauai and Niihau.

The Organic Act of 1900 renamed the Marshal as the High Sheriff and sustained the existing organization and functions of the police.

Act 39 of 1905 (the "County Act") established counties within the Territory of Hawaii. One result of this act was to place the island sheriffs within the county governments and subordinate to the respective boards of supervisors, rather than to the High Sheriff. Another result was that the High Sheriff ceased concurrently to be the Sheriff of Oahu. The High Sheriff retained responsibility to appoint jailors for Oahu Prison and other territorial-level confinement facilities; similar authority with respect to county jails was transferred to the counties.

At the same time, Act 41 of 1905 established boards of prison inspectors for each judicial circuit, and made the boards responsible for jails and prisons within their circuits. The High Sheriff was made responsible to the Board of Prison Inspectors of the First Judicial Circuit for Oahu Prison, and he was potentially responsible to other boards for territorial-level prison facilities in other circuits.

The High Sheriff was de facto Warden of Oahu Prison, and he was indexed as such in the Revised Laws of Hawaii, 1925, although he was never designated as such by statute. That situation was changed by Act 17, 1st Special Session, 1932, which created a separate office of Warden of Oahu Prison and removed from the High Sheriff the responsibility for territorial prisons and prisoners.

The High Sheriff continued as the Chief of Police of the Territory, responsible for the public peace, the arrest of fugitives, etc., until 1959, when his office was abolished by Act 1, 2nd Special Session, 1959 (the "Reorganization Act").

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

Series Number: 363 Series Title: Correspondence of the Marshal and High Sheriff

Date Range: n.d., 1844-1918

Quantity: 15.71 linear feet in 27 5-inch boxes and 40 volumes

Creator: Created or assembled by the Marshal of the Hawaiian Islands or one of his successors, the Marshal of the Republic of Hawaii or the High Sheriff of the Territory of Hawaii

Physical Characteristics/Condition: Consists of manuscript and typescript materials in generally poor condition. The volumes are letterpress copybooks in particularly poor condition. Many have covers missing, separated or separating. Some covers are secured with twill tape; a few volumes are enclosed in alkaline folders. Insect, rodent and water damage is common; damage from gall ink is present in a few volumes. Onion skin pages are embrittled and fragile. Many pages have accordion folds, are torn or have edges frayed. Illegibility of manuscript contents from fading or from blotting of ink exceeds 50% in some volumes. 20% to 30% illegibility is not unusual. The boxed records are acidified, embrittled, have folds, glue stains, fractures, cuts and tears, some of which resulted when the records were removed from scrapbooks, but they are generally legible.

Content Description: Contains correspondence created or compiled in the office of the Marshal or High Sheriff in the process, and as a result, of performing the functions of the Chief of Police of Hawaii and the concurrent functions of Coroner for Oahu and Warden of Oahu Prison. Letters are in English or Hawaiian. The files contain translations of some of the materials in Hawaiian. Letters to and from island sheriffs, deputies and jailors document routine administrative processes such as appointments, pay and promotions; operational matters such as transmittal of various reports, coroner's inquests, bonds, summons, sub poenae and instructions for serving writs; historical information on personalities and such things as labor unrest, searches for lepers, witness tampering, murder investigations, and opium smuggling; and commentary, such as remarks about Chinese secret societies. There is also miscellaneous correspondence with other officials and citizens on a wide variety of topics. The series provides a basic understanding of the scope of activities of the Marshals and the High Sheriffs, and of the methods they used to deal with the issues which confronted them.

Arrangement: Organized into two sub-series, outgoing letters and incoming letters. Incoming letters are organized into six sub-sub-series in the following order: letters received from the Sheriff of Hawaii; letters received from the Sheriff of Kauai; letters received from the Sheriff of Maui; letters received from the deputy sheriffs of Oahu; miscellaneous letters received; and letters received from foreign sources by the High Sheriff as Chief of Police of

Honolulu. Outgoing letters are in letterpress copybooks arranged chronologically. Within copybooks, arrangement is generally chronological. Incoming letters are foldered and boxed in sub-sub-series order and thereunder chronologically by file folder, except that the miscellaneous letters are arranged chronologically by year, thereunder alphabetically by island and thereunder chronologically by date for the years 1904-1910, 1915 and 1917. Within file folders, arrangement is generally chronological, except that the foreign letters have been numbered and are arranged in numerical order.

Notes:

1. Most of the records were received from Oahu Prison in 1947.

- 2. Some letters were signed by clerks or deputies; some were signed by the High Sheriff as Sheriff of Oahu; some were addressed to the Deputy Marshal; some were signed by a deputy island sheriff or island jailor; some were from the deputy High Sheriffs on the respective islands. The records include letters originated by local officials, such as the Attorney General, foreign officials, such as the British Consul, and private citizens; correspondence between the Prison Inspectors and third parties, including the Governor, non-correspondence items such as requests for parole, made to the Board of Prison Inspectors of the First Judicial Circuit, which were collected by the High Sheriff as Warden of Oahu Prison; and two letters which predate the establishment of the Office of the Marshal.
- 3. There is chronological overlap among copybooks; most copybooks are indexed.
- 4. Some outgoing letters in this series may be found as incoming letters in Series 364.
- 5. There are gaps in the records. Most notably, there are no outgoing letters for the period from 1846 to 1872 and no records at all from 1919 to 1959.
- 6. Original order of the records was lost when the records were rearranged during earlier processing, perhaps ca. 1960. The rearrangement was retained, except for limited additional rearrangement undertaken to achieve consistency of arrangement throughout the series, and to facilitate access.

Access: Because of they are extremely fragile, copybooks may be used only under supervision of the Reference Archivist.

4. There is chronological overlap among copybooks; most copybooks are indexed.

5. Some outgoing letters in this series may be found as incoming letters in Series 363.

6. There are gaps in the records. Most notably, there are no outgoing letters for the periods from 1846 to 1871 and from June 1 to November 3, 1901 (copybook no. XXIII), and there are no incoming letters from 1846 to 1850 and from 1861 to 1867 (except for one letter dated July 19, 1864).
